EFT is:

- A short-term focused treatment for individuals, couples and families, which blends family systems and experiential approaches to therapy with attachment theory.
- Developed by Dr. Sue Johnson, and showing strong empirical evidence for positive client outcomes. It is globally the most successful approach to couple therapy.
- Reflecting the most recent research on the nature of relationship distress, which results from a perceived threat to basic adult needs for safety, security, and closeness in intimate relationships.
- Based on a solid treatment map, which helps the therapist guide the couple away from conflict impasse into new bonding interactions.
- Holding the solution to helping couples thrive again!

Participants learn to:

- Conceptualise relationship distress and repair based on theories of attachment and emotion.
- Build strong therapeutic alliances utilising finely tuned validation and careful attunement.
- Help partners access the more vulnerable emotions underlying repetitive destructive cycles.
- Shape new patterns of engagement by creating powerful enactments.
